Please seriously consider removing the excise tax for the New England states or at the very least lowering the bar that makes a health plan required to pay the "Cadillac tax". In New England, health insurance has no real competition and the cost of health care in this region is far higher than the most of the country. This puts everyone in New England at risk to pay an excise tax. This is not a fair and equitable tax as it is. I am not an economic/health insurance expert. I work at an elementary school and I know my insurance supplied by my employer will dramatically increase to pay for the tax OR I worry that my school may drop insurance as a benefit all together. So please remember those of us who don't have choices and remove the excise tax.

Thank you,
Robin King
